Why invest in Our Fund?

With inflation being more persistent, markets have adjusted downwards with the expectation of a shift in focus by central banks to fighting inflation. The inflation challenge has been exacerbated by the recent invasion of Ukraine by Russia. This has forced the hands of the US Fed to raise interest rate by 75 basis points in September 2022, the third such consecutive increase and the fifth policy hike since the start of the year. The prospects for further rate hikes are still intact, as the fed has maintained its position that it remains data dependent and this has been bolstered by the latest reading on inflation being 8.3% for September. This highlights the challenge that policy makers face and the uncertainties that exist ahead. The expectation at this time is that the challenges will persist at least for the last quarter, when additional information will be released on inflation which will provide some amount of clarity as it relates to fed response. Given the uncertainty, the fund will effectively utilise its cash exposure to take advantage of opportunities as they present themselves. Additionally, tactical adjustments will be made to limit downside risks and capitalise on investments that are at discounts in the market. A diversified approach will be taken given the uncertainties surrounding the economic outlook and to limit downside risk.
